A Dream of a Snake

Written and Illustrated By:
Jude Provost
Once there was a snake named Fred who had a dream. His dream was to cross the world. So when they closed the gates at the zoo, he got to work. It might be dangerous, he thought. I should be prepared! So he began his journey.
While Fred was slithering, something felt fishy. He heard a noise in the bushes.

“BOO!!!”

It was his friend, Ben.

“Were you following me the whole time?”

“Yep!” said Ben.
They decided to go on their journey together. A little while longer, they saw a sign that said, “Ten miles to the airport. Go wherever you want!” They were so excited! They saw a suitcase and thought, someone must have left this here.

Fred said, “Let’s get in!” Ben agreed.
After a while, the snakes felt the suitcase moving. “I guess we are going into the airplane,” whispered Fred. After flying for a long time, they FINALLY stopped. The owner of the suitcase opened it up at the airport to check her stuff. She saw the snakes and screamed, then ran away. Fred and Ben figured out they had crossed the world, and they were so happy!

The End